In August 2010, Houston Community College began implementation of a district-wide version of its popular faculty online publishing platform, The Learning Web, to meet the requirements of HB 2504.

The redesign was completed in-house with software development by a leading open source solutions provider and was implemented using a deliberate strategy centered on usability.

Six months later, over 2,500 faculty have self-registered and added 8,000+ course syllabi and more than 11,000 learning resources with minimal training and support.
